Inmate Family Relocation Study Poster (English, Maori and Samoan language versions)

Department Research

The Department of Corrections wants to find out if inmates' families move to be closer to them while they are in prison. We also want to know if inmates stay in the prison area when they are released.

The research applies to you if you are serving a sentence of one year or more.

The main purpose of the study is to find out what difference prisons make to the communities around them.

A person from the study team will interview inmates who take part in the study. Interviews will take place mid to late February and will take about 15 minutes. No writing is required from inmates taking part.

When you take part in the study all information you provide will be confidential between you and the study team. You don't have to answer questions that you don't want to and can pull out at any stage if you decide that you don't want to be involved. No material produced from the study will state your name or identify you in any way.

Unit Managers will let you know when the researchers will be interviewing at Wanganui
